The staff and administration at Jefferson Middle School take situations of bullying very seriously. There are several resources available at JMS to help combat bullying. For example, students are encouraged to use the “Speak Up, Speak Out” application (found on the district webpage) to report bullying and/or to get more information. The PTO sponsored Courage Retreat is another program offered that confronts bullying issues. Also, throughout the school year, students participate in various anti-bullying activities in their advisories. JMS has a well-defined bullying protocol that is followed, by staff and administrators, whenever instances of bullying are reported. The JMS PTO strongly supports and participates in the anti-bullying initiatives that JMS currently has and continues to provide.

If you, or your student, are aware of any occurrences of bullying at JMS, we want to know.
